The Fellowship, established by the Ólafur Ragnar Grímsson Center, was launched in November 2022 at a conference in Ísafjörður; opened by the Prime Minister of Iceland, Katrín Jakobsdóttir

Out of 251 applications from 60 countries 10 applicants received the Fellowship from 2023 to 2025

The fellowships are supported by the University of Iceland, University of Akureyri, Reykjavík University, the University Center of the Westfjords, the biotechnology company Kerecis and Arctic Circle

The fellows are invited to stay for 2-6 weeks in the House of Grímur, where President Ólafur Ragnar Grímsson was born and his family lived.

The house is in the historic town of Ísafjörður, the capital of the beautiful Westfjords region in Iceland

Grímsson Fellowships are open to scientists, researchers, experts, scholars and writers of any nationality; in the fields of Climate Change, Environment, Social Sciences, Natural Sciences, Health Sciences, Oceans, Sustainability, Clean Energy, the Arctic, History, as well as Literature

The aim is to promote cooperation and knowledge as well as relations between international and Icelandic communities
